Firewood or Timber species

These species are useful as either firewood, construction timber, or craft timber. Species selection for commercial woodlotting needs to take into consideration site characteristics such as rainfall, soil type, frost intensity, and wind exposure. As well as using this guide, it is recommended that advice is sought from staff at State Flora Revegetation Section, or from Farm Forestry advisors in PIRSA. There are several relevant South Australian-orientated publications available including; Farmtrees for the Mount Lofty Ranges – A regional agroforestry handbook by P. Bullman, PIRSA (1995), and Economic Native Trees and shrubs for South Australia by N. Bonney, Greening of Australia, SA, (1997).
